

WAR LETTERS: ASHTABULA COUNTY

on display September & October 2016
at the Ashtabula Arts Center

Opening on Friday, September 9, 2016 in the Ashtabula Arts Center gallery, War Letters: Ashtabula County, will feature the wartime correspondence and photos of Ashtabula County veterans and civilians, capturing the stories of war from the men, women, and children who have lived and continue to live it.

This exhibit comes in conjunction with the 2016-17 G.B. Community Theatre season premiere production of If All the Sky Were Paper by author and historian Andrew Carroll. The submissions to the exhibit will also be archived digitally by the Ashtabula County District Library, forming the inaugural collection in their new Ashtabula Memory Project. A reception, free and open to the public, will be held in the gallery on Saturday, September 10, from 3-4 p.m.

The gallery is open Monday-Thursday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. The gallery is also open before performances and during intermission. Admission to the gallery is free.

by Andrew Carroll

Written by Andrew Carroll, Founding Director of the Center for American War Letters at Chapman University in Orange, California, this play is based on Carroll's global search for "the most extraordinary war letters ever written," a search that has amassed approximately 100,000 previously unpublished letters and e-mails from every war in U.S. history, from all 50 states and over 40 countries. Written by soldiers and civilians, men, women, and children, survivors and slain, family members, allies, and enemies, this war correspondence offers a look into life on the battlefield and the homefront. There is heart, horror, and even, unexpectedly, humor to be found in these letters, and together they reveal the ways war affects people throughout history and across the globe.

Performance Dates:
